WHY THIS WORK MATTERS

Opportunities our fearless builder girls deserve

We've all seen the statistics that paint a bleak picture of female underrepresentation in STEM and the trades:

22% of the STEM workforce is female.

50% of women in STEM careers leave within a decade.

7.9% of construction manager jobs are held by women.

These are problems of access, support, culture, and inclusion. Addressing the problems of underrepresentation and retention of women in these career paths is not merely for statistical gain, but for the betterment of our world. From what we've witnessed at Girls Garage, girls are hungry to be builders, leaders, to be given space, to take up space. They are the ones we've been waiting for.
