WHY THIS WORK MATTERS

We've all seen the statistics that paint a bleak picture of female underrepresentation in STEM and the trades:

4% of construction workers are female.

22% of the STEM workforce is female.

50% of them leave the field within a decade.

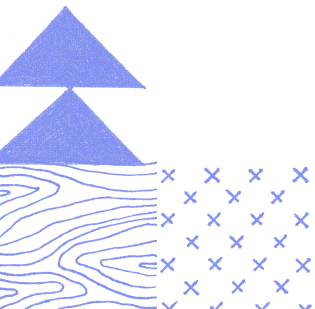

Their departures manifest deeper problems of access, support, culture, and inclusion. We believe that addressing the problems of underrepresentation and retention of women in STEM is not merely for statistical gain, but for the betterment of our world.

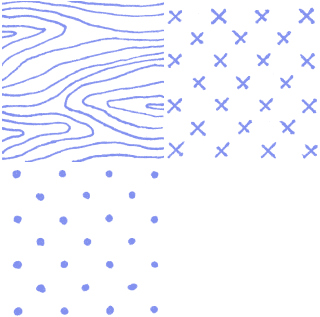

From what we've witnessed at Girls Garage, girls and gender-expansive youth are hungry to be builders and leaders. They are the one we've been waiting for.

"The skills I've learned at Girls Garage have given me the confidence to work in the construction industry as a young woman and aspiring engineer."

- Erica Chu, Class of 2020
